2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated Initiative Petitioner 24.060 will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies, as well as exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

Societal Cost-Benefit of Earned Sick Leave in Missouri: Adapted from Dicke, Ohler, & Thorpe (2022)

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposals Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-050 through 2024-061

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $.75 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

(9) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(C) An individual to whom the employee is legally married under the laws of any state, or a domestic partner who is registered as such under the laws of any state or political subdivision, or an individual with whom the employee is in a continuing social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(10) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(11) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(12) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies and exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.50 per hour. This rate would increase by $0.75 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $15.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 2,351.00
2026	$ 5,783.00
2027	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies and exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies and exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

As the policy is identical to previously submitted versions, it is identical to previous material submitted regarding the minimum wage for petitions 24-016 to 24-019. This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

- (1) "Construction", includes construction, reconstruction, improvement, enlargement, alteration, painting and decorating, or major repair, and does not include maintenance.
- (2) "Construction industry", includes any employer whose employees conduct or perform construction as a principal component of the employer's business or enterprise.
- (3) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.
- (4) "Director", Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.
- (5) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

- (7) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:
 - (A) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not, in fact, exist or where the services rendered to the organization are on a voluntary basis;

(M) Any individual employed in the construction industry and engaged in construction work, of fixed works, buildings, or structures or heavy and highway construction work, on the site of a building or construction job.

(8) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(9) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(11) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(12) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies and exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies and exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour by January 1, 2026 to $15.00 per hour.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they don't foresee a fiscal impact with this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies, and also exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour by January 1, 2026 to $15.00 per hour.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was submitting a fiscal note regarding petitions 24-050 to 24-061. As the policy is identical to previously submitted versions, it is identical to previous material submitted regarding the minimum wage for petitions 24-016 to 24-019. They also provided the following information:

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the

court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

(8) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (I) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (I) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee a fiscal impact with this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies, and also exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour by January 1, 2026 to $15.00 per hour.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from the County of Greene for initiative petition, 24-053 proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo, Version 4.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material effect on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [~~$8.60~~] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [~~$.85~~] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [~~$12.00~~] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. (E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they don't foresee a fiscal impact for this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $14.00 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.00 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 4,639.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 60,426.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material effect on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

As the policy is identical to previously submitted versions, it is identical to previous material submitted regarding the minimum wage for petitions 24-016 to 24-019. This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;

~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(1) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(H) Any individual employed on a casual or intermittent basis as a golf caddy, newsboy, or in a similar occupation;

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600

through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee a fiscal impact with this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as they believe they are excluded in the definition of employer and their employees are also excluded.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $14.00 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.00 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 4,639.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 60,426.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this proposed amendment will have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was submitting a fiscal note regarding petitions 24-050 to 24-061. As the policy is identical to previously submitted versions, it is identical to previous material submitted regarding the minimum wage for petitions 24-016 to 24-019. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending sections 290.502, 290.522, 290.525, 290.527, and 290.530 of the Revised Statutes of Missouri and enacting seventeen new sections to be known as sections 290.518, 290.519, 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.518. 1. Every employer shall provide employees who are to work for seven and one-half hours from the beginning of their shift a meal period of at least 30 continuous minutes. An employee who works in excess of seven and one-half hours shall be entitled to an additional 30 minute meal period for every additional seven and one-half hours worked. An employer shall schedule a meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of a shift, and for employees entitled to a second meal period no earlier than two hours and no later than five hours from the beginning of the second period of seven and one-half hours worked.

2. Meal periods may be unpaid and not counted as time worked provided the employee is completely relieved of all duty. Meal periods shall be time worked and paid at the employee's regular rate of compensation when an employee is required to perform any duties, whether active or inactive, while taking the meal period. An employer is permitted to make the meal period on duty only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it

infeasible for an employee to take a duty-free meal period. In such case, the employee shall be allowed to eat while on duty and shall be paid for the full 30 minutes on-duty meal period and further shall only be required to perform the limited duties during the meal period that make a fully duty-free meal period infeasible. It is the employer's burden to establish that a duty-free meal period is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide a duty-free meal period was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free meal period would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a meal period in accordance with this section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional one hour of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each shift that the meal period is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a meal period was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a meal period in accordance with this section.

4. If an employer requires an employee to eat on premises, it shall provide a suitable place for that purpose, with adequate seating and tables.

5. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

6. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.519. 1. Every employer shall provide employees a rest break of at least 10 continuous minutes for each four hours worked or major fraction thereof, to be taken as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof. An employer need not provide a rest break to employees whose total daily work time is less than three and one-half hours.

2. An employer shall not require the employee to perform any work during a rest break. Employees shall receive rest breaks without deduction from wages and time on rest breaks shall be considered time worked. Rest breaks are in addition to any meal period to which an employee is entitled. An employer need not provide a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof only when the nature of work or other circumstances exist that make it infeasible. In such case, the employee shall be paid an extra 10 minutes of compensation at the employee's regular rate of compensation without being required to perform additional work for that time, for each rest break of 10 continuous minutes that an employee does not receive, and further the employee shall be permitted to use restroom facilities without unreasonable restriction. It is the employer's burden to establish that providing a duty-free rest break of 10 continuous minutes as near as practical to the midpoint of each work period of four hours worked or major fraction thereof is "infeasible" by demonstrating that the failure to provide such a rest break was a business necessity, either because it was caused by exceptional and unanticipated circumstances that are temporary or because the provision of a duty-free rest break would prevent the employer from performing a vital function or pose a danger to the safety and health of other employees, patients, residents of a facility, service recipients of home and community-based services, clients, or the public.

3. If an employer fails to provide an employee a rest break in accordance with the applicable provisions of this Section, the employer shall pay the employee an additional 30 minutes of pay at the employee's regular rate of compensation for each work period that a rest break is not provided. There is a rebuttable presumption that an employee who did not take a rest break was not permitted to do so and that the employer failed to provide that employee a rest break in accordance with this section.

4. This section shall not apply to a public employer, as defined in Section 290.502.4, with respect to its employees.

5. The provisions of this section shall become effective January 1, 2025.

290.522. Every employer subject to any provision of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or of any regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall keep a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530, approved by the director, and copies of any applicable wage, meal period, and rest break regulations issued under sections 290.500 to 290.530, or a summary of the wage, meal period, and rest break regulations posted in a conspicuous and accessible place in or about the premises wherein any person subject thereto is employed. Employers shall be furnished copies of the summaries and regulations by the state on request without charge, except that the state may, but is not required to, furnish to employers copies of summaries and regulations relating to the provisions on meal periods and rest breaks without charge but regardless an employer shall keep a summary of those provisions posted consistent with this section.

290.525. Any employer who hinders the director in the performance of his duties in the enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 by any of the following acts is guilty of a class C misdemeanor:

- (1) Refusing to admit the director to any place of employment;
- (2) Failing to make, keep and preserve any records as required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (3) Falsifying any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- (4) Refusing to make any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 accessible to the director;
- (5) Refusing to furnish a sworn statement of any record required under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or any other information required for the proper enforcement of sections 290.500 to 290.530 to the director upon demand;
- (6) Failing to post a summary of sections 290.500 to 290.530 or a copy of any applicable regulation as required;
- (7) Discharging or in any other manner discriminating against any employee who has notified the director that he has not been paid wages in accordance with the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has caused to be instituted any proceeding under or related to sections 290.500 to 290.530, or who has testified or is about to testify in any such proceeding;
- (8) Paying or agreeing to pay wages at a rate less than the rate applicable under sections 290.500 to 290.530. Payment at such rate for any week or portion of a week constitutes a separate offense as to each employee;
- (9) Failing to provide meal periods and rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530;
- ~~[(9)]~~ (10) Otherwise violating any provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

Each day of violation constitutes a separate offense.

290.527. Any employer who pays any employee less wages than the wages to which the employee is entitled under or by virtue of sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee affected for the full amount of the wage rate and an additional amount equal to twice the unpaid wages as liquidated damages, less any amount actually paid to the employee by the employer and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. Any employer who fails to provide meal periods and rest breaks to an employee in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be liable to the employee for any additional wages for time worked if applicable, and in addition for the additional or extra pay due employees for failing to provide meal periods or rest breaks under section 290.518 and 290.519, respectively, and for costs and such reasonable attorney fees as may be allowed by the court or jury. The employee may bring any legal action necessary to collect the claim. Any agreement between the employee and the employer to work for less than the wage rate or to relinquish requirements associated with meal periods and rest breaks shall be no defense to the action. All actions for the collection of any deficiency in wages or failure to provide meal periods or rest breaks in accordance with sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be commenced within three years of the accrual of the cause of action.

290.530. Nothing in sections 290.500 to 290.530 shall be deemed to interfere with, impede, or in any way diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish wages, meal periods, rest breaks, or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum under the provisions of sections 290.500 to 290.530.

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (I) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (I) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated as a public employer, they do not foresee this petition to have a fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact, as it seems the state does not fall under the definition of employer. Also, their employees do not seem to fall under the definition of employees.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employers, which include state commissions and agencies.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage and employee leave benefits does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $14.00 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.00 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 4,639.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 60,426.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to counties as employers.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the initiative increases to the minimum wage and benefits is currently lower than their actual experience so the petition should have no near term impact on cost.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated there is no fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their Commission. The proposed sections 290.502.4, 290.518.5, and 290.519.4 RSMo specifically exclude the state and its agencies. The definition of the term "employer" in the proposed section 290.600(8) RSMo specifically excludes the state and its agencies as well. Therefore, the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.502.4, the Kansas City, MO Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board of Elections.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition will have little to no material effect on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany the paid sick leave provisions of petitions 24-050 through 2024-061 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

RE: Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061

VIA EMAIL: fiscalnote@auditor.mo.gov

To Whom it May Concern:

Towards Justice is a non-profit law firm that represents workers in litigation and other advocacy in our home state of Colorado and across the country. We write pursuant to RsMO 116.175 to assist your office in analyzing the fiscal impact of a ballot measure regarding compensated breaks for Missouri employees that has been proposed to be submitted to the voters of the state of Missouri at the November 5, 2024 election. To that end, we offer an examination of the items in subsection (2) of section 23.140 of the governmental accounting standards board.

This analysis describes only the estimated fiscal impact of proposed meal and rest break requirements in Missouri IP 24-050 through 24-061. We understand that others will provide a fiscal analysis of the proposed increase in the Missouri minimum wage.

(1) The cost of the proposed legislation to the state for the next two fiscal years:

The proposed employee breaktime law requires private employers to provide 10-minute paid rest breaks and 30-minute, duty-free, uncompensated meal breaks to employees. The legislation does not impose these requirements on public employers, "including the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state." Therefore, any fiscal impact to the state will depend on the impact these new requirements have on the private sector.

We predict that state-mandated meal and rest break requirements will increase employee health and happiness in Missouri's private sector. Employee happiness positively impacts productivity and task performance,¹ and improves employee energy levels at work over time.² Happiness is also associated with lower turnover rates, which reduce employer costs. In a study of turnover rates among nurses, researchers found that “implementing regularly scheduled rest breaks can be considered as an effective intervention for improving retention of nurses even in a situation of understaffing.”³

Breaks also offer mental and physical health benefits.⁴ Workers with fewer breaks suffer from poorer mental and physical health, including an “increased risk of reporting mental fatigue, physical fatigue, poor psychological detachment, inadequate rest, and poor sleep.”⁵ Meanwhile, rest breaks prevent workplace injuries, thereby reducing the cost on the state’s workers compensation fund.⁶ Increased overall health combined with the reduction in workplace injuries, reduce employee need to use sick or vacation time to deal with health issues.⁷

The increased productivity, lower turnover, better health, and reduced workplace injury rates associated with employee breaks would not only counteract any productivity loss associated with reduced on-duty time but would likely lead to an overall increase in private sector productivity in Missouri. Such a productivity increase would positively benefit the state through increased tax revenues.

(2) Whether or not the proposed legislation will establish a program or agency that will duplicate an existing program or agency:

This law will not create a program or agency. Instead, the legislation creates new rights for private sector employees in the state. The law would allow employees to use the existing court system to enforce these new rights. The law does not require the Missouri Department of Labor to participate in implementation or enforcement and would have no impact on the agency’s budget.

(3) Whether or not there is a federal mandate for the program or agency:

There is no federal mandate requiring meal or rest break protections for Missouri workers. Instead, the federal government allows employers to design their own break-time policies, while requiring that breaks shorter than 20 minutes be paid and allowing duty-free breaks longer than 30 minutes to be unpaid.⁸ Given this relatively weak federal protection, at least 20 states have adopted their own meal break protections for employees.⁹ Absent a federal mandate, Missouri voters could choose to do the same.

(4) Whether or not the proposed program or agency will have significant direct fiscal impact upon any political subdivision of the state:

The proposed employee meal and rest break protections do not apply to public employers and therefore will not have a significant direct fiscal impact on any political subdivision of the state. It is possible that the reduced risk of on-the-job injuries correlated with regular rest breaks will reduce demand on Missouri's worker compensation program. It is also possible that meal and rest break requirements will increase overall private sector productivity in Missouri, and thereby increase state tax revenue.

(5) Whether or not any new physical facilities will be required:

No new physical facilities will be required.

(6) Whether or not the proposed legislation will have an economic impact on small businesses:

The proposed meal and rest break protections would require Missouri businesses with fewer than 50 employees to provide employee meal and rest breaks. We anticipate that the productivity benefits associated with those breaks will offset the reduction in on-duty time. Overall, we anticipate that the meal and rest break requirements proposed would positively impact both employees and small businesses in Missouri.

We hope this summary proves useful as you assess the fiscal impact of the proposed meal and rest break measure. If we can be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Sincerely,
Towards Justice

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries for:

- (1) provision of a minimum or living wage that exceeds any in state law or state regulation;
- (2) provision of paid or unpaid days off or leave from work for sickness or illness, vacation, or personal or familial necessity that exceed any in state law or state regulation;
- (3) provision of prevailing wages for construction of local government public works funded in whole or part by local government funds or for construction of projects using a local government grant, tax abatement, or tax credit, that exceed any in state law or state regulation; or
- (4) provision of qualification standards for bidding and selection for procurements and contracts for services to a local government or for construction of local government public works funded in whole or part by local government funds or for construction of projects using a local government grant, tax abatement, or tax credit, including requirements relating to past performance, compliance with local, state, and federal laws, business integrity, financial dependability, the provision of wages and benefits, participation in an apprenticeship program, employee training and safety, and non-discrimination, that are stricter than any such qualification standards in state law or state regulation;

however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to employees of the state or another political subdivision, to public works undertaken by the state or another political subdivision, to purchases by the state or another political subdivision, to land, housing, or facilities owned by the state or another political subdivision, or to corporations owned and operated by the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee their department being impacted by this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated the proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article VI.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate that this initiative petition will have a fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employees, public works projects, and purchases by the state.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated due to the exemption of county employees in subsection 1 as well as the county's existing charter status, they estimate no financial impact from this initiative petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it may not have an impact on their college directly. Local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. The proposed Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 1 specifically excludes employees of the state, so the potential impact of the petition would not apply to their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated the initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated the Kansas City Police Department are employees of the state, so this petition would not apply to them.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their board.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated they see no material fiscal impact with this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund of Missouri indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Re: 2024-044 to 2024-049.

I write regarding the fiscal impact of petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049.

My name is Gina Chiala and I have been practicing law for sixteen years, I am the Executive Director of a nonprofit organization that enforces the rights of low-wage workers, and I have worked on social justice campaigns at the local, state, and national levels throughout my career.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would empower local voters and local governments in new ways, but if passed, no action would be required or compelled of local governments. Indeed, any future choices made by voters or their local elected representatives would need to be evaluated individually by those voters and leaders. Speculation about those choices is impossible and inappropriate for the fiscal note for these petitions.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would have no impact on revenues or expenses by state or local governments.

Thank you for your attention to this correspondence and for your ongoing work educating voters about initiative petitions they may consider.

Amy Blouin, President and CEO, Missouri Budget Project indicated Missouri Budget Project has assessed recently submitted initiative petitions 2024-044 through 2024-049 and determined that there is no fiscal impact of the measures. If approved by voters, the measures would protect the ability of cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact and enforce ordinances or regulations related to workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, and environmental matters. The petitions protect local control over these policies, but do not require cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact any of the policies. As a result, the petitions have no fiscal impact.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries which limit or restrict the amount of rent and fees to be charged for privately-owned single-family or multiple-unit residential rental property; however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to land, housing, or facilities owned by the state or another political subdivision or to corporations owned and operated by the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee their department being impacted by this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated the proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article VI.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate that this initiative petition will have a fiscal impact on their department because it exempts land and other facilities owned by the state or corporations, which may operate land or other state facilities.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate no fiscal impact from this initiative petition at present.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it may not have an impact on their college directly. They are not sure of the legality of this type of initiative with respect to their political subdivision status; however, local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. The proposed Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 1 specifically excludes employees of the state, so the potential impact of the petition would not apply to their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated the initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated the Kansas City Police Department are employees of the state, so this petition would not apply to them.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their board.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated they see no material impact with this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund of Missouri indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Re: 2024-044 to 2024-049.

I write regarding the fiscal impact of petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049.

My name is Gina Chiala and I have been practicing law for sixteen years, I am the Executive Director of a nonprofit organization that enforces the rights of low-wage workers, and I have worked on social justice campaigns at the local, state, and national levels throughout my career.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would empower local voters and local governments in new ways, but if passed, no action would be required or compelled of local governments. Indeed, any future choices made by voters or their local elected representatives would need to be evaluated individually by those voters and leaders. Speculation about those choices is impossible and inappropriate for the fiscal note for these petitions.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would have no impact on revenues or expenses by state or local governments.

Thank you for your attention to this correspondence and for your ongoing work educating voters about initiative petitions they may consider.

Sincerely,

Amy Blouin, President and CEO, Missouri Budget Project indicated Missouri Budget Project has assessed recently submitted initiative petitions 2024-044 through 2024-049 and determined that there is no fiscal impact of the measures. If approved by voters, the measures would protect the ability of cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact and enforce ordinances or regulations related to workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, and environmental matters. The petitions protect local control over these policies, but do not require cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact any of the policies. As a result, the petitions have no fiscal impact.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries for:

- (1) provision of a minimum or living wage that exceeds any in state law or state regulation;
- (2) provision of paid or unpaid days off or leave from work for sickness or illness, vacation, or personal or familial necessity that exceed any in state law or state regulation;
- (3) provision of notice of work schedules and notice of changes to work schedules, or the provision of minimum paid or unpaid rest times or meal periods during work shifts or time off between work shifts, that exceed any such notice requirements or any rest time or meal period or time off requirements in state law or state regulation; or
- (4) limits and restrictions to the amount of rent and fees to be charged for privately-owned single-family or multiple-unit residential rental property;

however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to employees of the state or another political subdivision, to land, housing, or facilities owned by the state or another political subdivision, or to corporations owned and operated by the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate that this initiative petition will have a fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employees and other political subdivisions of the state, as well as land and other facilities owned by the state.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated due to the exemption of county employees in subsection 1 as well as the county's existing charter status, they estimate no financial impact from this initiative petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it may not have an impact on their college directly. Local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. The proposed Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 1 specifically excludes employees of the state, so the potential impact of the petition would not apply to their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated the initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated the Kansas City Police Department are employees of the state, so this petition would not apply to them.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their board.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated they see no fiscal impact with the petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund of Missouri indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Re: 2024-044 to 2024-049.

I write regarding the fiscal impact of petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049.

My name is Gina Chiala and I have been practicing law for sixteen years, I am the Executive Director of a nonprofit organization that enforces the rights of low-wage workers, and I have worked on social justice campaigns at the local, state, and national levels throughout my career.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would empower local voters and local governments in new ways, but if passed, no action would be required or compelled of local governments. Indeed, any future choices made by voters or their local elected representatives would need to be evaluated individually by those voters and leaders. Speculation about those choices is impossible and inappropriate for the fiscal note for these petitions.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would have no impact on revenues or expenses by state or local governments.

Thank you for your attention to this correspondence and for your ongoing work educating voters about initiative petitions they may consider.

Amy Blouin, President and CEO, Missouri Budget Project indicated Missouri Budget Project has assessed recently submitted initiative petitions 2024-044 through 2024-049 and determined that there is no fiscal impact of the measures. If approved by voters, the measures would protect the ability of cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact and enforce ordinances or regulations related to workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, and environmental matters. The petitions protect local control over these policies, but do not require cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact any of the policies. As a result, the petitions have no fiscal impact.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries for:

- (1) provision of a minimum or living wage that exceeds any in state law or state regulation; or
- (2) provision of paid or unpaid days off or leave from work for sickness or illness, vacation, or personal or familial necessity that exceed any in state law or state regulation;

however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to employees of the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee their department being impacted by this petition.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated the proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article VI.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate that this initiative petition will have a fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employees and other political subdivisions.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated due to the exemption of county employees in subsection 1 as well as the county's existing charter status, they estimate no financial impact from this initiative petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it will have not an impact on their college directly. Local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. The proposed Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 1 specifically excludes employees of the state, so the potential impact of the petition would not apply to their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated the initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated the Kansas City Police Department are employees of the state, so this petition would not apply to them.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their board.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated no material fiscal impact with this petition and their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund of Missouri indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries for:

- (1) provision of a minimum or living wage that exceeds any in state law or state regulation;
- (2) provision of paid or unpaid days off or leave from work for sickness or illness, vacation, or personal or familial necessity that exceed any in state law or state regulation; or
- (3) provision of notice of work schedules and notice of changes to work schedules, or the provision of minimum paid or unpaid rest times or meal periods during work shifts or time off between work shifts, that exceed any such notice requirements or any rest time or meal period or time off requirements in state law or state regulation;

however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to employees of the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated they do not foresee a fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated that this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated the proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact for this initiative petition proposing to amend Article VI.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated this initiative petition will not have an impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate a fiscal impact as a result of this initiative petition.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated they do not anticipate that this initiative petition will have a fiscal impact on their department because it exempts public employees and other political subdivisions.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated there is no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. They estimate $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated due to the exemption of county employees in subsection 1 as well as the county's existing charter status, they estimate no financial impact from this initiative petition.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition.

Officials from St Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it may not have an impact on their college directly. They are not sure of the legality of this type of initiative with respect to their political subdivision status; however, local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri State Lottery Commission indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. The proposed Article VI, Section 1, paragraph 1 specifically excludes employees of the state, so the potential impact of the petition would not apply to their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated the initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated the Kansas City Police Department are employees of the state, so this petition would not apply to them.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their board.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated they see no fiscal impact with this petition.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund of Missouri indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Re: 2024-044 to 2024-049.

I write regarding the fiscal impact of petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049.

My name is Gina Chiala and I have been practicing law for sixteen years, I am the Executive Director of a nonprofit organization that enforces the rights of low-wage workers, and I have worked on social justice campaigns at the local, state, and national levels throughout my career.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would empower local voters and local governments in new ways, but if passed, no action would be required or compelled of local governments. Indeed, any future choices made by voters or their local elected representatives would need to be evaluated individually by those voters and leaders. Speculation about those choices is impossible and inappropriate for the fiscal note for these petitions.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would have no impact on revenues or expenses by state or local governments.

Thank you for your attention to this correspondence and for your ongoing work educating voters about initiative petitions they may consider.

Sincerely,

Amy Blouin, President and CEO, Missouri Budget Project indicated Missouri Budget Project has assessed recently submitted initiative petitions 2024-044 through 2024-049 and determined that there is no fiscal impact of the measures. If approved by voters, the measures would protect the ability of cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact and enforce ordinances or regulations related to workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, and environmental matters. The petitions protect local control over these policies, but do not require cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact any of the policies. As a result, the petitions have no fiscal impact.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Article VI is amended by enacting one new section to be known as Section 34 of Article VI, to read as follows:

VI Section 34. Local control by local government.

1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution or state law to the contrary, any city, town, village or municipality containing ten thousand or more inhabitants, including cities which have and have not adopted a charter and incorporated and unincorporated cities and towns, and any county of any number of inhabitants, including counties which have and have not adopted a charter, shall have the power to enact and enforce ordinances and regulations which establish and enforce standards or requirements within its geographic boundaries relating to a workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, or environmental matter as defined in subsection 3 of this Section; however, such an ordinance and regulation enacted or enforced under the grant of power of this Section shall not apply to employees of the state or another political subdivision, to public works undertaken by the state or another political subdivision, to purchases by the state or another political subdivision, to land, housing, or facilities owned by the state or another political subdivision, or to corporations owned and operated by the state or another political subdivision. A city, town, village, municipality or county as described in this subsection 1 shall have the power to enact and enforce an ordinance or regulation authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section notwithstanding a conflict or inconsistency with state law or state regulation provided that the ordinance or regulation establishes or enforces standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 and subsection 3. Further, no state law or state regulation currently in effect or later enacted or promulgated shall, either expressly or impliedly, restrict or prohibit any such city, town, village, municipality or county from enacting and enforcing ordinances and regulations authorized by this Section following the effective date of this Section relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 and subsection 3 or act to preempt or nullify such ordinances and regulations relating to the establishment or enforcement of standards or requirements as limited by this subsection 1 and subsection 3.

2. Nothing herein is intended to diminish or detract from the existing powers of a city, town, village, municipality or county under this Constitution. This Section shall be liberally construed to promote the public policy of local control by local government. A city or county which has adopted a charter for its own government may amend that charter as permitted by the Constitution to provide for the exercise of the power set forth in this Section, if such power is currently limited or denied by its charter. However, nothing herein shall be interpreted or applied to authorize a city, town, village, municipality or county to enforce any ordinance or regulation enacted under the authority of this Section in a manner that is in conflict with federal law.

3. As used in this Section, an ordinance or regulation which establishes and enforces standards or requirements relating to "a workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, or environmental matter" is limited to mean:

- (1) provision of a minimum or living wage that exceeds any in state law or state regulation;
- (2) provision of paid or unpaid days off or leave from work for sickness or illness, vacation, or personal or familial necessity that exceed any in state law or state regulation;
- (3) provision of notice of work schedules and notice of changes to work schedules, or the provision of minimum paid or unpaid rest times or meal periods during work shifts or time off between work shifts, that exceed any such notice requirements or any rest time or meal period or time off requirements in state law or state regulation;

- (4) provision of prevailing wages for construction of local government public works funded in whole or part by local government funds or for construction of projects using a local government grant, tax abatement, or tax credit, that exceed any in state law or state regulation;
- (5) provision of qualification standards for bidding and selection for procurements and contracts for services to a local government or for construction of local government public works funded in whole or part by local government funds or for construction of projects using a local government grant, tax abatement, or tax credit, including requirements relating to past performance, compliance with local, state, and federal laws, business integrity, financial dependability, the provision of wages and benefits, participation in an apprenticeship program, employee training and safety, and non-discrimination, that are stricter than any such qualification standards in state law or state regulation;
- (6) limits and restrictions to the amount of rent and fees to be charged for privately-owned single-family or multiple-unit residential rental property;
- (7) limits and restrictions on interest rates and fees of payday loans and installment loans at rates and fees lower than those under any state law and state regulation;
- (8) limits and restrictions on the locations of payday loan and installment loan businesses;
- (9) licensing of mechanical and electrical contractors and workers performing mechanical and electrical work, which set qualifications that are more demanding than any under state law or state regulation;
- (10) limits and restrictions on the use of water by and the handling and disposal of waste of concentrated animal feeding operations involving poultry or livestock that are more stringent than those under state law or state regulation; or,
- (11) limits and restrictions on the foreign ownership of farmland that are more stringent than those under state law or state regulation.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to local government ordinances and regulations does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated due to the exemption of county employees in subsection 1 as well as the county's existing charter status, they estimate no financial impact from this initiative petition.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this legislation would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated they believe because of their political subdivision status it will have not an impact on their college directly. Local governments enacting minimum wage regulations or other employee benefit requirements could indirectly affect the college's cost structure; however, the effects cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri State Lottery Commission indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Missouri State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their commission.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to their commission. Speculation about those choices is impossible and inappropriate for the fiscal note for these petitions.

Petitions 2024-044 to 2024-049 would have no impact on revenues or expenses by state or local governments.

Thank you for your attention to this correspondence and for your ongoing work educating voters about initiative petitions they may consider.

Amy Blouin, President and CEO, Missouri Budget Project indicated Missouri Budget Project has assessed recently submitted initiative petitions 2024-044 through 2024-049 and determined that there is no fiscal impact of the measures. If approved by voters, the measures would protect the ability of cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact and enforce ordinances or regulations related to workplace, employment, affordable housing, predatory lending, safety, and environmental matters. The petitions protect local control over these policies, but do not require cities, towns, villages, municipalities, and counties to enact any of the policies. As a result, the petitions have no fiscal impact.

NOTICE: The proposed amendment revises Article VIII of the Constitution by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 24a, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30.

Be it resolved by the people of the state of Missouri that the Constitution be amended:

Section A. Article VIII of the Constitution is revised by adopting eight new Sections to be known as Article VIII, Sections 24, 24a, 25, 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30 to read as follows:

Section 24. 1. Prior to the certification of the election results, each election authority shall, at a minimum, undertake a manual audit of randomly selected precincts which shall equal the greater of: 5% of all election precincts within the election authority's jurisdiction, one precinct, or any number required by law. No such audit shall be performed, conducted, or overseen by any non-governmental entity. All ballots cast at such election by valid registered voters in such precincts shall be subject to the manual audit. All ballots cast but not counted for any reason shall additionally be subject to a separate manual review, but the results of such separate review shall not be used to impact any election result absent a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction or pursuant to any recount procedure authorized by law. The manual audit shall be open to the public, be completed within fourteen (14) days of the conclusion of the election, and results from the manual audit shall be publicly available within two (2) days after its completion. If, based on the manual audit, the election authority finds evidence of errors in the original tabulation that would change the result of any election or exceed a threshold established by law, the manual audit shall be converted to a full and binding manual recount of all ballots in that election. Each election authority shall report with documentation to the secretary of state, at least once every four years, demonstrating that the election authority conducted at a minimum the manual audit required in this section.

Section 24a. 1. Subject to appropriation and upon request by an election authority, the secretary of state shall provide technical assistance and recommended guidelines for the management, administration, and accuracy of voter rolls and registrations maintained and used by any election authority, including but limited to signature reviews and removing deceased individuals from the voter rolls, and may provide funding assistance to election authorities.

2. Subject to appropriation and federal law, election authorities shall update all voter rolls which such election authority has control over, upon the proper notification by a state or federal agency of any voter who is not a qualified registered voter in the jurisdiction of such election authority, including deceased individuals.

Section 25. 1. All established political parties in the state shall have a right to have candidates seeking the established political party's nomination for public office appear on the established political party's primary election ballot, and to have their nominee(s) for public office appear on the general election ballot. For purposes of this Section, "established political party" shall mean a political party which, at either of the last two general elections, polled for its candidate for any statewide office more than two percent of the entire vote cast for the office.

2. Any group of persons desiring to form a new political party throughout the state, which shall include being formed for all districts and counties in which the party may have nominations, shall file a petition with the secretary of state which shall be signed by at least ten thousand registered voters of the state obtained at large.

3. All established political parties in the state will retain their established political party status unless such party at any two consecutive general elections fails to poll for a candidate for any statewide office more than two percent of the entire vote cast for the office.

4. Any person desiring to be an independent candidate for any office to be filled by voters throughout the state, or for any congressional district, state senate district, state representative district, or circuit judge district, shall file a petition with the secretary of state. Any person desiring to be an independent candidate for any county office shall file a petition with the election authority of the county. If an independent candidate is to be nominated for a statewide office, the petition shall be signed by at least ten thousand registered voters of the state. If the independent candidate is to be nominated for a district or county office, the petition shall be signed by the number of registered voters in the district or county which is equal to at least two percent of the total number of voters who voted at the last election for candidates for the office being sought or is equal to ten thousand voters, whichever is less.

Section 26. To ensure the accuracy and integrity of elections, votes in all elections in Missouri shall be cast on paper ballots. Direct Recording Electronic voting machines, which record votes directly into computer memory, with or without Voter Verified Paper Audit Trail printers, shall not be purchased, leased, or used in Missouri elections after December 31, 2024.

Section 27.1. At each primary election, there shall be as many separate ballots as there are established political parties with candidates in the election.

2. In each primary election, each eligible registered voter shall be entitled to receive the ballot of one and only one political party, designated by the voter before receiving his ballot. Each eligible registered voter who participates in a party primary shall be entitled to vote on all questions and for any nonpartisan candidates submitted by political subdivisions and special districts at the primary election. Each eligible registered voter who does not wish to participate in a party primary may vote on all questions and for any nonpartisan candidates submitted by a political subdivision or special district at the primary election. For purposes of this Section "nonpartisan candidate" shall mean a candidate who is not a candidate of any political party and who is running for an office for which party candidates may not run.

3. The candidate who receives the most votes in each race, except in primaries for federal offices and statewide offices under Article IV, shall be declared the winner of the election for that office. If a race has multiple positions, then the candidate who receives the most votes shall be declared the winner of the first position, the candidate receiving the second-most votes shall be declared the winner of the second position, the candidate receiving the third-most votes shall be declared the winner of the third position, and this process shall continue until all open positions are filled in such election.

Section 28. 1. The chair of the county committee, or the city committee of a city not within a county, of each established political party with a candidate on the ballot shall have the exclusive right to designate an observer for any polling place on any day in which votes are being cast who may be present until all ballots are cast, and an observer for each location at which absentee ballots are counted, who may be present while the ballots are being prepared for counting and counted. No later than four business days before the election, the chair shall provide signed designation forms with the names of the designated observers to the local election authority for confirmation of eligibility to serve as an observer. The local election authority, after an observer does not meet the qualifications of subsection 3 of this section, the designating party chair may designate a replacement verifying the eligibility of each designated observer, shall sign off on the designation forms, unless the observer is found not to have the qualifications established by subsection 3 of this section. If the election authority determines that observer and provide the local election authority with the name of the replacement observer before 5:00 p.m. of the Monday preceding the election. The designating chair may substitute observers at his or her discretion during such hours.

2. An independent candidate shall also have the right to designate an observer in the same manner as each political party, except should more than one independent candidate appear on the ballot, the independent candidates shall agree on a single observer per polling place or location referenced in subsection 1 of this section.

3. All persons selected as observers shall only be required to have the same qualifications required by law for election judges.

4. In a non-partisan election, each non-partisan candidate on the ballot shall have the right to designate an observer in the same manner as each political party for each polling place or location at which such candidate appears on the ballot, except should more than three non-partisan candidates appear on the ballot, the non-partisan candidates shall agree on no more than two observers per polling place or location referenced in subsection 1 of this section. The General Assembly shall enact laws to provide for procedures to carry out this subsection 4.

5. For purposes of this section, "observer" shall mean a watcher, challenger, or observer of an election as provided by current or any future law enacted by the General Assembly.

Section 29. 1. Notwithstanding any provision of this Constitution which may be to the contrary, ballot titles and summaries for ballot questions, whether proposed by the General Assembly, or through citizen initiative or referendum, shall be unbiased, fair, and sufficient and shall only include language found in the proposed amendment.

2. Candidates and ballot questions, including ballot titles, appearing on the ballot shall not be changed, altered, added, or removed within eight weeks of the date of an election.

Section 30. If any portion, clause, or phrase of this Amendment is, for any reason, held to be invalid or unconstitutional in a final judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction, the remaining portions, clauses, and phrases shall not be affected, but shall remain in full force and effect.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, they could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, they may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated there is no fiscal impact to their agency.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated this proposal creates no direct obligations or requirements to their department that would result in a fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated they would not anticipate a direct fiscal impact from this proposal.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated this petition would amend provisions relating to paper ballots. Section 26 would seem to mandate paper ballots for all elections in the state. All of the other sections deal with county election authorities, precincts, political parties, state and federal offices, and primary and general elections. The assumption is that it wouldn't apply to elections beyond those discussed. Would the state really ban elections conducted by a show of hands, voice vote, or by acclamation for the Missouri House Speaker or the local PTA? Should such a provision not be required; the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if such provision is required the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations to implement. Therefore they estimate it would need an annual cost of $5,000 to $5,253.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's Office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated they do not anticipate an impact.

Officials from the Governor's office indicated this proposal relating to elections does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Missouri House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this proposed initiative petition would have no fiscal impact on their department or MHTC.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to elections does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated there is no fiscal impact on the courts.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In FY 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over 5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. The SOS estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of our publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Boone County indicated the Boone County Clerk's Office estimates no additional costs or savings.

Officials from Clay County indicated they estimate the cost of this petition as follows:

- ~$5,000 per primary and general elections, or $10,000 every even year, to conduct the manual audits from Section 24.1.
- ~$5,000 per primary election to print extra ballots for non-partisan matters only.
- No effect from the independent candidate petition provision in 25.4 as under the County Constitution all candidates are nonpartisan.

Officials from Greene County indicated in reviewing initiative petition 24-043 it has been determined there will be an increased cost to the County of Greene if voters vote to amend Article VIII. Section 24 is the only section of the sections in Article VIII where a cost increase is anticipated.

Section 24:

Currently a manual hand-counting audit is performed after each election for no less than 5% of all voting precincts in any election. In a general election, five separate contests on the ballot are randomly selected to be manually counted. The language in Section 24 appears to require all contests on the ballot to be hand counted.

In analyzing the estimated cost for this petition, they looked at the costs to complete a manual count for the August 2022 and November 2022. There was no significant cost increase for the April election with this measure.

August 2022

In August 2022, it took 10 election judges (5 bi-partisan teams) a total of seven hours (per team) to complete the manual recount for 5 precincts for 5 contests. This cost was approximately $857.50.

The average Greene County ballot in August 2022 had a total of 12 contests and ballot issues on the ballot.

7 hours divided by 5 contests equals 1.4 hours per contest. 1.4 hours per contest multiplied by 12 contests equals 16.8 hours. 16.8 x 10 election judges equals 168 hours in total. It is important to note their hourly rate has now increased to $14.75 (effective January 1, 2023) from $12.25 (2022 hourly rate). Total estimated cost with this formula: $2,478.

August Primary Estimated Cost Increase: $1,620.50

November 2022

In November 2022, it took 10 election judges (5 bi-partisan teams) approximately 126 hours total to complete the manual recount for 5 precincts for 5 contests. This cost was $1,543.50.

The average Greene County ballot in November 2022 had a total of 25 contests and ballot issues on the ballot.

126 hours divided by 5 contests equals 25.2 hours per contest. 25.2 hours per contest multiplied by 25 contests equals 630 hours. It is important to note their hourly rate has now increased to $14.75 (effective January 1, 2023) from $12.25 (November 2022 hourly rate). Total estimated cost with this formula: $9,292.50

November General Estimated Cost Increase: $7,749.00

The following total estimated cost increase is the sum of 3 elections during a general election year when a minimum of 3 public elections would be held.

Total General Election Year Estimated Cost Increase: $9,369.50

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition should have no fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated the amendment could have a small negative fiscal impact on their City because the election authority could pass the costs of the manual audit on to their City.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from the St. Louis Community College indicated this initiative does not appear to directly impact their College from a cost or revenue perspective. However, changes to the make-up of the legislature as a result of any initiative could have positive or negative effects on their college.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated this will have no impact on their Board.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated audit procedures and voter roll maintenance would have no fiscal impact.

Currently the Election Board uses DREs as ADA voting machines. Under current state laws these DREs will be illegal come January 1, 2024; while replacement of DREs will have a fiscal impact, the Board has funding for a new voting system.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated if this petition were to become law, temporary expense and staff overtime could increase by $20,000 or more, per election, by recounting all the races on the 5% of the ballots selected for testing. Currently, they only recount a sample of those races. This petition doesn't address this issue. Also, recounting all the races on a long ballot could jeopardize them certifying in a timely manner.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board of Election Commissioners indicated the following:

Section 24.1

If a full manual recount of the entire election were required a massive number of part-time workers would need to be brought in to conduct the manual recount. A separate place would need to be rented to accommodate those part-time workers and transportation and security for ballots arranged.

Part-time Workers – Large Election	$12,000.00
Rental for 6-7 days	$ 5,000.00
Security & Transportation of Ballots	$ 2,500.00
April, August & November Elections of Even-Numbered Years	$19,500.00
	(per election)
Total Per Even-Number Year	$58,500.00

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated no fiscal impact.

The State Auditor's office did not receive a response from Adair County, Callaway County, Cass County, Cole County, Jackson County, Jasper County, St. Charles County, St. Louis County, Taney County, the City of Cape Girardeau, the City of Columbia, the City of Jefferson, the City of Joplin, the City of Kirksville, the City of Mexico, the City of Raymore, the City of St. Joseph, the City of St. Louis, the City of Springfield, the City of Union, the City of Wentzville, the City of West Plains, Cape Girardeau 63 School District, Hannibal 60 School District, Malta Bend R-V School District, Mehlville School District, Wellsville-Middletown R-1 School District, State Technical College of Missouri, University of Missouri, and the Clay County Board of Election Commissioners.

Fiscal Note Summary

State governmental entities estimate no costs or savings for this proposal. Local governmental entities estimate costs could increase by at least $40,000 each municipal general election, $51,000 each primary election, and $52,000 each general election.

Be it enacted by the people of the state of Missouri:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because the proposed initiative specifically exempts the state.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition would have no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16.25/hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning $15/hour were to receive $16.25/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $13,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

Note: All wages in 2022 dollars

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(1) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(2) "Director", Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(3) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) "Earned paid sick time", time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(A) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not, in fact, exist or where the services rendered to the organization are on a voluntary basis;

(C) Any individual employed for less than four months in any year in a resident or day camp for children or youth, or any individual employed by an educational conference center operated by an educational, charitable or not-for-profit organization;

(D) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational organization where employment by the organization is in lieu of the requirement that the individual pay the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization or where earnings of the individual employed by the organization are credited toward the payment of the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization;

(E) Any individual employed on or about a private residence on an occasional basis for six hours or less on each occasion;

(F) Any individual employed on a casual basis to provide baby-sitting services;

(G) Any individual employed by an employer subject to the provisions of part A of subtitle IV of title 49, United States Code, 49 U.S.C. §§ 10101 et seq.;

(H) Any individual employed on a casual or intermittent basis as a golf caddy, newsboy, or in a similar occupation;

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(J) Any individual employed by a retail or service business whose annual gross volume sales made or business done is less than five hundred thousand dollars;

(K) Any individual who is an offender, as defined in section 217.010, who is incarcerated in any correctional facility operated by the department of corrections, including offenders who provide labor or services on the grounds of such correctional facility pursuant to section 217.550; or,

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(C) An individual to whom the employee is legally married under the laws of any state, or a domestic partner who is registered as such under the laws of any state or political subdivision, or an individual with whom the employee is in a continuing social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department because the proposed initiative specifically exempts the state.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $14.00 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.00 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 4,639.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 60,426.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price

Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated there is no impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16/hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning $15/hour were to receive $16/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $10,400.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young

adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $14.00 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.00 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(1) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(3) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) "Earned paid sick time", time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(A) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not, in fact, exist or where the services rendered to the organization are on a voluntary basis;

(D) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational organization where employment by the organization is in lieu of the requirement that the individual pay the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization or where earnings of the individual employed by the organization are credited toward the payment of the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization;

(E) Any individual employed on or about a private residence on an occasional basis for six hours or less on each occasion;

(F) Any individual employed on a casual basis to provide baby-sitting services;

(H) Any individual employed on a casual or intermittent basis as a golf caddy, newsboy, or in a similar occupation;

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(J) Any individual employed by a retail or service business whose annual gross volume sales made or business done is less than five hundred thousand dollars;

(K) Any individual who is an offender, as defined in section 217.010, who is incarcerated in any correctional facility operated by the department of corrections, including offenders who provide labor or services on the grounds of such correctional facility pursuant to section 217.550; or,

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. All or any portion of the earned paid sick time requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall not apply to employees covered by a bona fide collective bargaining agreement to the extent that such requirements are expressly waived in the collective bargaining agreement in clear and unambiguous terms.

4. With the exception noted in subsection 3, any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $14.00 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.00 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.00 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 4,639.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 60,426.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated there is no impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16/hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning $15/hour where to receive $16/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $10,400.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased each year by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, effective January 1 of each of the next [four] two years, until it reaches [$12.00] $16.25 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2027. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2028, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

"Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(13) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(14) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(15) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(16) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour each year of the next two years until reaching $16.25 per hour by January 1, 2027.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00
2027	$ 97,725.00

Raising the minimum wage above $15 per hour pulls more employees into the cost estimate, which makes calendar year 2027 much higher.

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 8 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated there is no impact to their agency.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(8) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated the current lowest paid election board employee earns $15/hour. This petition contemplates raising the minimum wage incrementally until in 2027, where the minimum wage would be $16.25/hour (cost of living adjustments would occur thereafter).

Excluding the incremental raises, if the approximately 5 individuals earning 15/hour were to receive $16.25/hour, this would result in a yearly increase by the election board of $13,000.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000

Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000

Across all eight version of the petitions estimates show a low of $576 million and a high of over $1.3 billion in wage growth for Missouri workers. These estimates include direct impacts to workers making under the minimum wage as well as secondary impacts to workers whose wages are predicted to rise as a result of the minimum wage increases.

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. Subsection 3 of this section shall not apply to a public employer with respect to its employees. Any public employer that is subject to subsections 1 and 2 of this section shall continue to be subject to those subsections.

290.600. As used in sections 290.600 through 290.642:

(1) "Department", Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(2) "Director", Director of the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations.

(3) "Domestic violence", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(4) "Earned paid sick time", time that is compensated at the same hourly rate and with the same benefits, including health care benefits, as the employee normally earns during hours worked and is provided by an employer to an employee for the purposes described in section 290.606, but in no case shall this hourly amount be less than that provided under section 290.502.

(5) "Employee", any individual employed in this state by an employer, but does not include:

(A) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational, charitable, religious, or nonprofit organization where the employer-employee relationship does not, in fact, exist or where the services rendered to the organization are on a voluntary basis;

(C) Any individual employed for less than four months in any year in a resident or day camp for children or youth, or any individual employed by an educational conference center operated by an educational, charitable or not-for-profit organization;

(D) Any individual engaged in the activities of an educational organization where employment by the organization is in lieu of the requirement that the individual pay the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization or where earnings of the individual employed by the organization are credited toward the payment of the cost of tuition, housing or other educational fees of the organization;

(E) Any individual employed on or about a private residence on an occasional basis for six hours or less on each occasion;

(F) Any individual employed on a casual basis to provide baby-sitting services;

(H) Any individual employed on a casual or intermittent basis as a golf caddy, newsboy, or in a similar occupation;

(I) Any individual who is employed in any government position defined in 29 U.S.C. §§ 203(e)(2)(C)(i)-(ii);

(J) Any individual employed by a retail or service business whose annual gross volume sales made or business done is less than five hundred thousand dollars;

(K) Any individual who is an offender, as defined in section 217.010, who is incarcerated in any correctional facility operated by the department of corrections, including offenders who provide labor or services on the grounds of such correctional facility pursuant to section 217.550; or,

(L) Any individual described by the provisions of section 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(8).

(6) "Employer", any person acting directly or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee; provided, however, that for the purposes of sections 290.600 through 290.642 "employer" does not include the United States Government, the state, or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, public higher education institution, or other political subdivision of the state.

(7) "Family member", any of the following individuals:

(A) Regardless of age, a biological, adopted or foster child, stepchild or legal ward, a child of a domestic partner, a child to whom the employee stands in loco parentis, or an individual to whom the employee stood in loco parentis when the individual was a minor;

(B) A biological, foster, stepparent or adoptive parent or legal guardian of an employee or an employee's spouse or domestic partner or an individual who stood in loco parentis when the employee or employee's spouse or domestic partner was a minor child;

(D) A grandparent, grandchild, or sibling (whether of a biological, foster, adoptive or step relationship) of the employee or the employee's spouse or domestic partner; or

(E) A person for whom the employee is responsible for providing or arranging health or safety-related care, including but not limited to helping that individual obtain diagnostic, preventative, routine, or therapeutic health treatment or ensuring the person is safe following domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

(8) "Health care professional," any individual licensed under federal or any state law to provide medical or emergency services, including but not limited to doctors, nurses, certified nurse midwives, mental health professionals, and emergency room personnel.

(9) "Person", any individual, partnership, association, corporation, business, business trust, legal representative, or any organized group of persons.

(10) "Retaliatory personnel action", denial of any right guaranteed under sections 290.600 through 290.642, or any threat, discharge, suspension, demotion, reduction of hours, or any other adverse action against an employee for the exercise of any right guaranteed herein. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.615. 1. Employers shall retain records documenting hours worked by employees and earned paid sick time taken by employees, for a period of not less than three years, and shall allow the Department access to such records, with appropriate notice and at a mutually agreeable time, to monitor compliance with the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. To the extent permitted by law, the Director may inspect such records, and the records shall be open for inspection by the Director by appointment. Where the records required under this section are kept outside the state, the records shall be made available to the Director upon demand. Every such employer shall furnish to the Director on demand a sworn statement of time records and information upon forms prescribed or approved by the Director. All the records and information obtained by the Department are confidential and shall be disclosed only on order of a court of competent jurisdiction.

3. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department or Director to access or inspect records or to create forms relating to the inspection of records if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.618. 1. The Department may, in accordance with chapter 536, promulgate rules for the implementation, enforcement, and administration of sections 290.600 through 290.642. Any rule or portion of a rule, as that term is defined in section 536.010, that is created under the authority delegated in this section shall become effective only if it complies with and is subject to all of the provisions of chapter 536 and, if applicable, section 536.028. This section and chapter 536 are nonseverable and if any of the powers vested with the general assembly pursuant to chapter 536 to review, to delay the effective date, or to disapprove and annul a rule are subsequently held unconstitutional, then the grant of rulemaking authority and any rule proposed or adopted after November 5, 2024, shall be invalid and void.

290.621. 1. The Department may investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to $500 per day of each day of a continuing violation. A final decision of the department is subject to review in accordance with the provisions of chapter 536.

2. The Department may develop and implement an outreach program to inform employees, parents, and persons who are under the care of a health care provider about the availability of earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642. This program may include the distribution of notices and other written materials to child care and elder care providers, domestic violence shelters, schools, hospitals, community health centers and other health care providers in Missouri.

3. A municipality, county, city, town, or village may adopt ordinances, rules, and regulations to investigate and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, establish and implement a system to receive complaints regarding non-compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642 and to investigate and attempt to resolve complaints between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, and establish additional means of enforcement, with respect to employers within, or employees performing work while physically present in, the geographic boundaries of the municipality, county, city, town, or village. Any such ordinance, rule, or regulation shall be consistent with this law and any Department rules or regulations and system for compliance and enforcement. The municipality, county, city, town, or village may exercise such powers as allowed by any applicable charter or ordinance, including requiring by subpoena the testimony of witnesses and production of books, records, and other evidence relative to any matter under investigation or hearing, issuing notices of violation, holding hearings on notices of violation, making determinations, recovering unpaid earned sick time, and imposing fines for willful violations of up to the maximum allowed for an ordinance violation. Before investigating or seeking to resolve any complaint between the complainant and the subject of the complaint, the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall give notice to the Department with a copy of the complaint and, within 14 days of such notice, the Department may intervene as of right and participate in the matter to ensure that the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642 or, alternatively, the Department may institute its own proceedings in which case the municipality, county, city, town, or village shall refrain from acting on the matter so long as the complaint is being investigated and resolved in the interest of effective enforcement of sections 290.600 through 290.642. If the Department does not, within 14 days, intervene or instigate its own proceedings, the municipality, county, city, town, or village may, without the Department, investigate and attempt to resolve the complaint and take other additional means within its power to enforce sections 290.600 through 290.642 against the subject of the complaint. In no event shall an employer be subject to compliance proceedings arising out of a single set of facts after having already been subjected to a final compliance order by another governmental entity.

4. Nothing in this section shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department, a municipality, county, city, town, or village to conduct investigations and ascertain compliance with sections 290.600 through 290.642, to establish and implement a system to receive or resolve complaints, to establish additional means of enforcement, or to conduct outreach and education, including the creation of notices and other written materials, concerning sections 290.600 through 290.642, if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.

290.624. 1. Any employer who willfully violates or fails to comply with any of the provisions and requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be guilty of a class C misdemeanor; provided, however, that an employer who willfully violates the notice and posting requirements of section 290.612 shall be guilty of an infraction.

2. For purposes of this section, each day of violation or failure to comply and each employee affected shall constitute a separate offense.

290.627. 1. Any individual who claims to have been aggrieved by a failure of an employer to comply with any portion of sections 290.600 through 290.642, including but not limited to the failure to provide earned paid sick time or to allow employees to use such time consistent with sections 290.600 through 290.642, or who claims to have suffered a retaliatory personnel action, shall have a right of action and may commence a civil action in the appropriate court of jurisdiction within three years of the accrual of the cause of action, to obtain appropriate relief with respect to such unlawful violation. Such action may be brought without first filing an administrative complaint.

2. In a civil action under this section, if the court finds a violation has occurred, the court may grant as relief, as it deems appropriate and to the extent permitted by law, any permanent or temporary injunction, the full amount of any unpaid earned sick time plus any actual damages suffered as the result of the employer's violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642, an additional amount equal to twice any unpaid earned sick time as liquidated damages, costs, and reasonable attorney's fees as may be allowed by the court, and other legal or equitable relief as may be appropriate to remedy the violation, including, without limitation, reinstatement to employment and back pay.

290.630. 1. Except as otherwise required by law, an employer may not require disclosure of details relating to an employee's or an employee's family member's health information, domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking as a condition of providing earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. Unless as otherwise required by law, any health or safety information possessed by an employer regarding an employee or employee's family member must:

(A) be maintained on a separate form and in a separate file from other personnel information;

(B) be treated as confidential medical records; and

(C) not be disclosed except to the affected employee or with the express written permission of the affected employee.

290.633. 1. With respect to employees covered by a valid collective bargaining agreement in effect on November 5, 2024, no provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply until the stated expiration date in the collective bargaining agreement; however, further the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall apply upon any such agreement's renewal, extension, amendment, or modification in any respect after November 5, 2024.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed to interfere, impede, or otherwise diminish the right of employees to bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing in order to establish earned paid sick time or other conditions of work in excess of the applicable minimum standards under the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. Any waiver by an employee of rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void.

290.636. 1. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed to discourage or prohibit an employer from the adoption or retention of an earned paid sick time policy more generous than the one required herein.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the obligation of an employer to comply with any contract, collective bargaining agreement, employment benefit plan, or other agreement providing more generous paid sick time to an employee than required herein. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be construed as diminishing the rights of public employees regarding paid sick time or use of paid sick time as provided in the laws of Missouri and ordinances of political subdivisions pertaining to public employees.

290.639. 1. Sections 290.600 through 290.642 provide minimum requirements pertaining to earned paid sick time and shall not be construed to preempt, limit, or otherwise affect the applicability of any other law, regulation, requirement, policy, or standard that provides for greater accrual or use by employees of earned paid sick time or that extends other protections to employees.

2. Nothing in sections 290.600 through 290.642 shall be interpreted or applied to create a power or obligation contrary to any federal law, rule, or regulation.

290.642. Except as detailed in section 290.618, all of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are severable, and if any provision, including any section, subsection, subdivision, paragraph, sentence, or clause, or the application thereof to any person or circumstance, is found by a court of competent jurisdiction to be invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted, such decision shall not affect other provisions or applications of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that can be given effect without the invalid, unconstitutional, or unconstitutionally enacted provision or application, and to this end the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 are declared severable.

Assumptions

Officials from the Attorney General's office indicated they expect that, to the extent that the enactment of this proposal would result in increased litigation, their office could absorb the costs associated with that increased litigation using existing resources. However, if the enactment of this proposal were to result in substantial additional litigation, their office may be required to request additional appropriations.

Officials from the Department of Agriculture indicated their department has no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Economic Development indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Elementary and Secondary Education indicated no fiscal impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Higher Education and Workforce Development indicated no impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Health and Senior Services indicated this initiative petition has no impact on their department.

Officials from the Department of Commerce and Insurance indicated this petition, if passed, will have no anticipated cost or savings to their department.

Officials from the Department of Mental Health indicated they assume no direct fiscal impact from the proposed statutory amendment to Chapter 290 as government employees are exempt from its provisions. However, employees of providers that receive DMH funding would be impacted, which would include all contracted DMH providers.

Officials from the Department of Natural Resources indicated this proposal might impact their department however, they defer to the Office of Administration to respond.

Officials from the Department of Corrections indicated no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations indicated:

This petition would amend provisions relating to the accumulation of sick time required for employees depending on how many employees are employed by the employer. It also has various requirements regarding how sick time can be used and procedures employers must use. Violations are deemed misdemeanors, and damages are allowed to be awarded in civil suits. It states that the DOLIR "may" create new notices, promulgate rules, and initiate outreach programs but that the DOLIR is not required to create notices if it requires the appropriation of funds. It also states that the DOLIR may inspect employment records and investigate complaints of noncompliance. Still, such inspection is not required if it requires the appropriation of funds, and the cost estimate would be zero.

The funding source will be from General Revenue if the DOLIR receives complaints to enforce it. Therefore the DOLIR estimates it would need two Regulatory Auditors and one Administrative Support Assistant person at an annual ongoing cost of $255,975 by 2027, plus an initial information technology (IT) component of $28,318 and office equipment of $25,011.

Officials from the Department of Revenue indicated no impact.

Officials from the Department of Public Safety indicated no impact for their department, Director's office.

Officials from the Missouri Department of the National Guard indicated no fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Department of Social Services indicated no impact anticipated by their department.

Officials from the Governor's Office indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the House of Representatives indicated no fiscal impact. The state seems excluded from section 3 and we are not included in the definition of an employer in the new sections.

Officials from the Department of Conservation indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their agency because it specifically exempts the state from the definition of employer.

Officials from the Department of Transportation indicated this initiative petition excludes the state from the requirements of the proposed new law. Therefore there is no anticipated fiscal impact to their department.

Officials from the Office of Administration indicated this proposal relating to minimum wage law does not financially impact their office.

Officials from the Office of State Courts Administrator indicated beginning January 1, 2025, the minimum wage rate would be not less than $13.75 per hour. This rate would increase by $1.25 per hour by January 1, 2026 to $15.00 per hour.

The increase to wages would approximately have the fiscal impact below for each year:

Calendar Year	Annual Increase from the Current Wage
2025	$ 3,495.00
2026	$ 9,215.00

This is an estimated impact if not exempt.

Officials from the Missouri Senate indicated they anticipate no fiscal impact.

Officials from the Secretary of State's office indicated each year, a number of joint resolutions that would refer to a vote of the people a constitutional amendment and bills that would refer to a vote of the people the statutory issue in the legislation may be considered by the General Assembly.

Unless a special election is called for the purpose, Referendums are submitted to the people at the next general election. Article III section 52(b) of the Missouri Constitution authorizes the general assembly to order a special election for measures referred to the people. If a special election is called to submit a Referendum to a vote of the people, Section 115.063.2 RSMo. requires the state to pay the costs. The cost of the special election has been estimated to be $7 million based on the cost of the 2020 Presidential Preference Primary.

Their office is required to pay for publishing in local newspapers the full text of each statewide ballot measure as directed by Article XII, Section 2(b) of the Missouri Constitution and Section 116.230-116.290, RSMo. Funding for this item is adjusted each year depending upon the election cycle. A new decision item is requested in odd numbered fiscal years and the amount requested is dependent upon the estimated number of ballot measures that will be approved by the General Assembly and the initiative petitions certified for the ballot. In fiscal year (FY) 2014, the General Assembly changed the appropriation so that it was no longer an estimated appropriation.

In FY19, over $5.8 million was spent to publish the full text of the measures for the August and November elections. Their office estimates $75,000 per page for the costs of publications based on the actual cost incurred for the one referendum that was on the August 2018 ballot.

Their office will continue to assume, for the purposes of this fiscal note, that it should have the full appropriation authority it needs to meet the publishing requirements. Because these requirements are mandatory, they reserve the right to request funding to meet the cost of their publishing requirements if the Governor and the General Assembly again change the amount or continue to not designate it as an estimated appropriation.

Officials from the Office of the State Public Defender indicated this initiative petition will have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the State Treasurer's office indicated no fiscal impact to their office.

Officials from Clay County indicated this petition does not apply to county governments under 290.502.4 for minimum wage and the contemplated new Section 6 for sick leave regarding the definition of an employer. Clay County provides more generous sick leave than this measure as well.

They do estimate additional costs from this petition of $2,000 a year between the Circuit Court and Prosecutor to enforce the misdemeanor and civil action provisions.

Officials from Greene County indicated there are no estimated costs or savings to report from their county for this initiative petition proposing to amend Chapter 290, RSMo.

Officials from St. Louis County indicated this initiative petition has no apparent fiscal impact on their county.

Officials from the City of Kansas City indicated this amendment would have no fiscal impact on their city.

Officials from Metropolitan Community College indicated no fiscal impact to their college.

Officials from St. Louis Community College indicated the petition request is generally lower than their current compensation structure and therefore its passage appears to have minimal effect on their college. That being said, increases calculated by Consumer Price Index or other indexed methods may affect them in the future and that cannot be determined at this time.

Officials from the Missouri Lottery indicated no fiscal impact to their agency. Current hourly wages are $15 or higher.

Officials from the State Tax Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have a fiscal impact on their agency.

Officials from the Missouri Veterans Commission indicated this initiative petition creates no fiscal impact to the Missouri Veterans Commission. However, given the proposed changes to section 290.502 RSMo, they would note that those changes would make it more difficult for state agencies to recruit new employees. As to the remainder of the petition, the definition for the term "employer" found in the proposed section 290.600(6) specifically excludes the state and its agencies, so the requirements of the petition would not apply to the Commission.

Officials from the Missouri Ethics Commission indicated this initiative petition does not have fiscal impact on their Commission.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Police Commissioners indicated per Section 290.600, the Kansas City, Missouri Police Department is exempt as a political subdivision of the state.

Officials from the St. Louis County Board of Elections indicated they predict no fiscal impact from this petition.

Officials from the Board of Election Commissioners City of St. Louis indicated no fiscal impact; the lowest paid election board employee makes $15/hour.

Officials from the Kansas City Board of Election Commissioners indicated this petition has no material fiscal impact on their operations.

Officials from the Platte County Board of Elections indicated no impact.

Officials from the Jackson County Election Board indicated this petition has no fiscal impact to their Board.

Officials from the Children's Trust Fund indicated no impact.

Officials from the State Auditor's office indicated since this proposed initiative petition does not apply to government entities, this would have no fiscal impact on their office.

Officials from the Missouri Gaming Commission indicated this initiative petition will not have any fiscal impact on their agency.

Lindsey Baker, Research Director, Missouri Budget Project indicated in summary, they estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state and local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue and decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy. She also provided the following information:

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Earned Sick Leave Petitions 24-025-042

We estimate the fiscal impact of earned sick leave on state & local revenue is minimal because the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will more than offset the modest administrative expenses outlined in previous estimates. Further, earned sick leave has the potential to provide substantial societal savings and a significant boost to Missouri's economy.

In addition to helping employees by allowing them to address their health needs without losing their jobs or ability to pay their bills, paid sick leave has many benefits for employers, including a healthier workforce, reduced turnover, and increased productivity. The benefits of paid sick leave have been highlighted by the COVID-19 pandemic, illustrating the importance of workers being able to recover at home without lost wages and without risking spread of contagious disease in the workplace.

Several ballot measures have been filed (24-025-042) that would require employers to provide earned sick leave in Missouri. Though the measures vary slightly, each would require employers to provide a minimum of 3-7 days of paid leave to employees, depending on hours worked and size of business. If implemented, Missouri would join the seventeen states, plus the District of Columbia, who ensure employees can earn paid sick leave to care for themselves or family members.ⁱ

An estimated 211,000 Missourians and their families would benefit from the earned sick time provided through these initiatives, with low-wage workers disproportionately likely to benefit from this policy.ⁱⁱ Expanding earned sick leave in Missouri is estimated to provide a net savings to society of between $612.4-$774.1 million annually depending on the number of days provided.ⁱⁱⁱ

	3-5 Scenario*	5-7 Scenario*
Estimated Cost Savings	$1.26B	$1.29B
- Employment Related Savings	$436.73M	$466.6M
- Health Related Savings	$825.61M	$825.61M
Estimated Costs (Employer & State Admin)	$488.22M	$679.77M
Estimated Net Societal Benefit*	$774.11M	$612.44M

In the 3/5 scenario, small employers are required to offer at least three days of leave and large employers at least five days. The 5/7 scenario requires small employers to offer at least five days of paid sick leave and large employers to offer at least seven days of paid leave. A small employer defined as less than 15 employees.*

Societal Cost Savings from Earned Sick Leave in Missouri

Employment Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri's workforce would become stronger, more stable, and more productive leading to economic growth.

- Reduced Absenteeism. Access to earned sick leave allows workers to stay home, reducing the overall spread of illness in the workplace; this leads to fewer illnesses among workers and fewer overall days off work.^{iv}
- Reduced Turnover. Access to earned sick leave gives workers the ability to address their health needs and those of their families, without having to quit a job or risk being fired. Access to paid sick leave is associated with reduced job turnover, which in turn creates significant savings for businesses.^v
- Reduced Presenteeism. Employers who do not offer paid sick leave have higher rates of "presenteeism" or lost productivity due to employees working while injured or sick.^{vi} Offering paid sick leave reduces the likelihood of working at reduced capacity and allows workers to recover from illness or injury more quickly.

Health Related Savings. With earned sick leave, Missouri would become a healthier state as workers would have the ability to care for themselves and their families, while simultaneously benefiting their communities.

- Reduced Flu Contagion in Society. Workers without paid sick leave are more likely to come to work sick, increasing the likelihood of spreading the illness.^{vii} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to stay home when ill, thus reducing the overall spread of influenza throughout the community.
- Reduced Workers Compensation Costs. Workers with access to paid leave are less likely to be injured on the job,^{viii} reducing overall workers comp claims and cost to employers.
- Reduced ER Visits. Paid sick leave is associated with fewer trips to the emergency room.^{ix} Access to paid sick leave allows workers to properly care for themselves and family members during an illness, preventing an escalation of the illness.
- Improved Nursing Home Care. Unpaid sick leave is especially problematic in nursing homes as the residents are especially vulnerable to the consequences of high turnover, absenteeism and presenteeism.^x Access to paid sick leave allows nursing home workers to take care of themselves so that they can better care for residents.

Estimated Fiscal Impact of Petitions 24-025-042

While previous estimates show a cost associated with state level administration and enforcement for earned sick leave of approximately $1 million, we also expect that earned sick leave will be associated with a significant potential for increased revenue collections & decreased spending on services associated with the cost savings outlined above.

- Increased revenue collections. A stronger and more productive workforce is associated with economic growth. Economic growth is in turn associated with growth in both state and local revenue as both sales & income tax collections rise due to increased spending and wages.
- Reductions in spending on services. When workers are able to care for themselves and their families (and others in their community) they are less likely to have minor illnesses escalate into costly health problems. This reduces the overall cost of health care, particularly among low-wage workers who are disproportionately likely to lack access to paid leave. This in turn reduces state and local spending on health other related public services.

As a result, we estimate the fiscal impact on state & local revenue of earned sick leave will be minimal as the increased revenue & decreased spending associated with a stronger workforce and healthier communities will offset the modest expenses associated with state level administration. While we are confident that a net savings will be realized, the size of the savings is too speculative to estimate exact fiscal impact.

Re: Proposal Related to Chapter 290, RSMo, Petition 2024-025-042

Dear Auditor Fitzpatrick:

A Better Balance is writing to submit our fact sheet titled "Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business" to accompany petition 24-025-042 and to inform the fiscal note process. We thank you for considering our submission.

A Better Balance, a national nonprofit advocacy organization with four regional offices, uses the power of the law to ensure that working individuals can care for themselves and their loved ones without jeopardizing their economic security. Through legislative advocacy, policy, direct legal services, strategic litigation, and public education, our organization works around the country to advance policies like paid sick leave, paid family and medical leave, quality childcare and eldercare, and anti-discrimination protections for pregnant workers and caregivers. From Arizona and Colorado to Duluth (MN) and beyond, our organization has worked on the growing number of paid sick leave laws now in effect.

The enclosed fact sheet summarizes research and data on the resoundingly positive effect that paid sick leave has on business. When paid sick leave policies are in place, businesses financially benefit from increased worker productivity, reduced spread of contagious illness in the workplace, and lower employee turnover. Research has also underscored that workers and the larger community also have better health outcomes overall when there is access to paid sick leave. As documented in the attached fact sheet, paid sick leave has been shown to work well for businesses and workers throughout the country.

Thank you for giving us the opportunity to submit this information. Please do not hesitate to contact A Better Balance at cgomez@abetterbalance.org if we can provide any additional assistance.

Sincerely,
A Better Balance

Paid Sick Leave Is Good for Business

The research is clear: paid sick leave isn't just good for workers, it's good for business as well. Healthy workers are essential to a successful business and a strong economy. When workers have access to paid sick leave, they demonstrate increased job satisfaction, commitment, and morale, while employers—and their bottom lines—reap the benefits of increased worker performance and productivity and reduced worker turnover. And access to guaranteed paid sick leave is a vital component to keeping businesses open and safe through the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.

Access to paid sick leave increases worker productivity and reduces the spread of contagious illness in the workplace, leading to direct savings for businesses.

- Workers with minor illnesses are less productive than their healthy co-workers.¹ Paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (when employees show up to work while sick), which costs businesses approximately $207.6 billion annually in reduced productivity.² After Washington State implemented its paid sick leave law, for example, the percentage of workers that went to work while sick decreased significantly.³
- Paid sick leave also reduces the spread of contagion between co-workers—further increasing productivity and labor in the workplace.⁴ Absenteeism caused by the introduction of flu-like illness in the workplace is estimated to cost employers up to 111 million workdays per year.⁵ Even before the pandemic, states with paid sick leave requirements saw a 40% decrease in influenza rates.⁶

Paid sick leave has proven to be particularly crucial to keeping businesses open during the COVID-19 pandemic.

- As the country with the highest cumulative number of COVID-19 cases,⁷ and the only one of the thirteen G12 countries with no paid sick leave,⁸ it is undeniable that the U.S. will need paid sick leave to end this crisis, to save lives, and to minimize disruption to businesses struggling to avoid the spread of COVID-19 in the workplace.
- Paid sick leave has been critical to keeping businesses open throughout the pandemic. One study found that states in which workers gained temporary access to paid sick leave through the federal Families First Coronavirus Response Act⁹ had around 400 fewer confirmed COVID-19 cases per day as a result.¹⁰

Employers with paid sick leave benefit from reduced worker turnover and better relationships with their employees, saving employers the cost of recruiting, interviewing, and training new hires.

- In general, worker turnover is estimated to cost employers the equivalent of 21% of a worker's annual compensation.¹¹ However, providing paid sick leave only increases labor costs by an average of 2.7 cents per hour worked¹² and workers with paid sick leave are less likely to leave their jobs,¹³ saving businesses money on turnover costs such as interviewing and training.¹⁴

- Paid sick leave also increases worker loyalty and job satisfaction—factors known to increase productivity and job retention.¹⁵ After Connecticut’s paid sick law went into effect, nearly 30% of surveyed employers reported improved employee morale, and over 20% reported increased employee motivation or loyalty.¹⁶
- Two years after paid sick leave went into effect in New York City, one employer reported that “the impact that I saw in my business was a much stronger bond between ourselves and our employees, higher productivity, and a more successful business, not a less successful business.”¹⁷

Paid sick leave also saves employers money by reducing the likelihood of workplace accidents.

- Throughout the country, direct and indirect costs associated with on-the-job injuries cost employers billions of dollars.¹⁸ Workers with paid sick leave are 28% less likely than workers without access to paid sick leave to be injured on the job.¹⁹

Lack of paid sick leave makes workers more likely to go to work while sick and puts co-workers and our communities at risk. With paid sick leave, our workplaces and communities are healthier, which improves the bottom line for employers.

- Access to sick leave will be essential to overcoming the COVID-19 pandemic, as evidenced by previous pandemics. For example, it is estimated that the lack of paid sick leave was responsible for 5 million incidents of flu-like illness during the H1N1 pandemic.²⁰
- In a simulated influenza epidemic, 72% of employees who caught the flu at work did so because of exposure to other employees attending work while sick; paid sick days would reduce flu incidences among workers by approximately 6% across all workplaces, and by over 7% in workplaces with 49 or fewer employees.²¹
- As explained above, access to paid sick leave reduces presenteeism (employees showing up to work while sick) and reduces overall contagion.²² Presenteeism is linked to the spread of harmful contagions to co-workers and customers.²³
- A study of data from the 2009 flu outbreak found that workers with paid sick leave were 30 percent more likely to be vaccinated and were more likely to seek treatment when they were sick with flu-like symptoms compared to those without paid sick leave.²⁴ This has proven true for COVID-19 as well—in June 2021, workers whose employers provided paid time off to get the vaccine or recover from any side effects were 24% more likely to have received at least one dose of the vaccine than workers whose employers provided no paid vaccine leave.²⁵
- A lack of access to paid sick days is particularly harmful for service industry workers. Nearly two-thirds of restaurant workers have cooked or served food while sick,²⁶ and in 2011, nearly one in five food service workers went to work vomiting or with diarrhea, creating dangerous health conditions.²⁷

- People without access to paid sick leave are 1.5x more likely to go to work while they have a contagious illness and are nearly twice as likely to send a sick child to school or daycare than those with access to it.²⁸
- States that have implemented paid sick leave laws had an 11% decrease of cases of flu-like illnesses in their first year after enactment.²⁹

Workers with paid sick leave are more likely to seek preventative care than workers without paid sick leave, leading to better health outcomes and less time away from work.

- People without paid sick days tend to be unable to make time for preventative health care, such as cancer screenings and flu shots, which makes it more likely that such workers will have more significant healthcare needs at later stages of an illness.³⁰
- Workers with access to paid sick days report better general health than workers without paid sick days and are less likely to delay preventive medical care for themselves or for their family.³¹

Paid sick leave has proven to work well for businesses all over the U.S., and experience shows that workers don't abuse paid sick leave.

- Business practices don't have to change to keep up with paid sick leave laws. In a survey of New York City employers after the city's paid sick law was implemented, 91% of employers reported no reduction in hiring, 97% indicated they did not reduce hours, about 94% did not raise prices, and nearly 85% of employers reported no change in their overall business costs.³²
 - In a similar survey of employers in Connecticut a year and a half after the state's paid sick law went into effect, nearly 90% of employers reported no reduction in hours, and about 85% did not raise prices.³³
- Paid sick leave laws stimulate economic growth. When San Francisco's paid sick law went into effect in 2007, the city's job growth actually exceeded that of nearby counties, despite unfounded fears that the law would cause an economic slowdown.³⁴
 - In comparison to other surrounding cities, Seattle saw greater increases in the number of employers in the city when its paid sick leave law was implemented,³⁵ and in general, job growth continued on an upward trend.³⁶
 - After New York City's paid sick days were implemented, the average wage for hourly workers increased and the average number of weekly absences declined.³⁷ On the law's first anniversary, the New York City government released a report touting its successful implementation and noting that since the law went into effect, "the city has had steady job growth and the lowest unemployment in six years."³⁸
- Workers don't abuse paid sick leave. After New York implemented its paid sick leave law, 98% of employers reported no cases of employee abuse of sick days.³⁹

- Employers know that paid sick leave laws work. Two years after New York City’s paid sick law was implemented, a staggering 86% of New York City employers polled supported the law.⁴⁰
- Studies in Washington, D.C. and Seattle also saw no negative economic effects following implementation of their paid sick leave laws in either job loss or movement of businesses out of the city. A report from the Washington D.C. Auditor, issued five years after passage of the District’s sick leave law, found that the law “did not have the economic impact of encouraging business owners to move a business from the District nor did the [law] have the economic impact of discouraging business owners to locate a business in the District of Columbia.”⁴¹ Likewise, a study of the economic impact of Seattle’s sick leave law found that a “preliminary look at available data shows no widespread negative economic impact as some opponents of the ordinance feared.”⁴²
- Recognizing the benefits of paid sick leave, San Francisco, Washington, D.C., and New York City—all among the earliest adopters of paid sick leave laws—later expanded their paid sick leave laws, underscoring how well these laws are working for workers, employers, and communities.

Richard von Glahn, Policy Director, Missouri Jobs with Justice indicated he was resubmitting the information previously submitted for initiative petitions 24-016 through 24-023 for initiative petitions 24-031 through 24-042. Petitions 24-031 through petition 24-042 all contain the language from petitions 24-016 through 24-019 in regards to the minimum wage. They do not believe the fiscal impact of petitions 24-031 through 24-042 will be different from 24-016 through 24-019, so their submission is the same. They also provided the following information:

This letter is from Richard von Glahn and Missouri Jobs with Justice Voter Action, proponents of the above referenced minimum wage petitions. Pursuant to RsMO 116.175 we write to submit the following fiscal impact information to assist your office in the analysis of of the above mentioned eight minimum wage petitions.

Our analysis estimates the impact of the proposed petitions on state sales and personal income tax revenue in Missouri. Our analysis follows a process that has been used in the past to estimate the impact of minimum wage increases, with some updates. We are unable to provide calculations on local sales and income tax revenue, although it should be noted that impacted workers in Kansas City and St. Louis City are subject to a 1% earnings tax on income, so those municipalities will experience revenue gains from their constituents seeing wage increases. Local sales tax revenue will also increase, although the different taxing rates per jurisdiction made estimates overly cumbersome to predict. We also reference some economic literature on the impact of minimum wage laws on employment , social benefit spending and downstream impacts of wage increase in order to address some common claims made by opponents of similar initiatives in the past as well as provide a broader context of impact of wage increases.

As each of these petitions explicitly exclude public employers¹ from proposed increases, we do not include an analysis of payroll expenses to these employers.

I. Economic literature on the employment impact of increases in the minimum wage

With 30 states and numerous other municipalities having increased the minimum wage above the federal minimum, there is ample evidence of the impact of these increases. While opponents will undoubtedly cite individual studies that predict catastrophic job loss and resulting decline in state revenue, the most credible comprehensive review of empirical evidence comes from Hristos Doucouliagos and T.D. Stanley and shows no discernible impact on employment. Their study, “Publication Selection Bias in Minimum- Wage Research? A Meta-Regression Analysis²” combines over 1,500 estimates from 64 different studies. This peer reviewed article has the advantage of any single study in that it used a set of predetermined, objective criteria for weighing the validity of statistical findings across different studies that produced different results.

In addition to this comprehensive review, a recent publication “Are $15 Minimum Wages too High” provides an analysis of California which has gradually increased the minimum wage from $8 in 2014 to $15 in 2022. Their analysis focuses on impacts of two groups of workers most exposed to minimum wage increases- teenagers and restaurant workers and finds that “substantial and ongoing pay increases throughout the treatment period and find no significant disemployment effects, even in relatively low-wage counties.³” This is the most recent study and is analyzing a similar level of increases and time period as the proposed initiatives.

There is ample empirical and theoretical evidence that corroborates these studies. First, relative to total wage and labor costs, minimum-wage increases are small. Second, employers and workers respond to minimum wage increases in many ways that reduce the actual costs to employers.

Probably the most important economic response to a higher minimum wage is a reduction in turnover. At higher wages, employers fill vacancies faster and retain employees longer, boosting total employment and average productivity per worker while reducing direct and indirect training costs. A 2017 study by employee benefits news found that turnover costs as high as 33% of a workers annual salary⁴. Avoiding these costs provides an obvious benefit to employers and research from Dube, Lester and Reich in 2012⁵ finds “striking evidence that separations, new hires, and turnover rates for teens and restaurant workers fall substantially following a minimum wage increase.”

Based on these empirical studies we feel confident in concluding that there is no evidence that increasing the minimum wage will reduce employment. Accordingly, we do not include any projections for impact on employment and the resulting effects on revenue in our analysis.

II. Impact on state and federal spending on social safety net programs

One area where the state is likely to experience significant direct savings from an increase in the minimum wage is on state spending on social safety net programs. Research suggests that at least 44% of Missouri recipients of Medicaid, SNAP or the Federal EITC are members of working families who would be directly impacted by the proposed initiatives⁶. State and Federal spending for this share of the workers on these programs totals $2,400,000.00 dollars. While programs such as SNAP are paid entirely by the federal government, medicaid has a percentage paid by state revenue and the state EITC going into effect this year will cost the state revenue. While individual circumstances often dictate the cost of these or similar programs to the state, it holds that as workers earn higher wages at work access to these benefits will decrease, saving the state potentially tens of millions of dollars.

III. Estimate of number of workers impacted statewide and impact on wages

Number of impacted workers				Total Wage Growth
	Direct impact	Indirectly impacted	Total
Proposal 1	293,000	198,000	491,000	$576,819,000
Proposal 2	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,076,047,000
Proposal 3	331,000	194,000	525,000	$733,133,000
Proposal 4	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,222,991,000
Proposal 5	293,000	198,000	491,000	$688,721,000
Proposal 6	382,000	235,000	616,000	$1,213,236,000
Proposal 7	331,000	194,000	525,000	$852,823,000
Proposal 8	394,000	241,000	635,000	$1,346,386,000

IV. Estimate of state income and sales tax revenue

⁶ <https://laborcenter.berkeley.edu/the-public-cost-of-a-low-federal-minimum-wage/>

Based on the wage increase numbers above and the conclusion that minimum wage increases have no discernible impact on employment, we next calculate the impact of projected increases on state sales tax revenue and individual state income tax revenue for Missouri. As previously mentioned, we do not include estimates for local impacts, although we do project increased revenue there as local jurisdictions do capture sales tax revenue and in the case of the Kansas City and the City of St. Louis, increases in income are subject to the individual 1% earnings tax. We do not include any speculation of increased prices as a way to offset higher wages, although any such increase would result in higher sales tax revenue.

	Estimated sales tax revenue*	Estimated individual income tax revenue	Total revenue
Proposal 1	$8,738,808	$24,367,615	$33,106,423
Proposal 2	$16,302,112	$45,457,412	$61,759,524
Proposal 3	$11,712,965	$32,660,864	$44,373,829
Proposal 4	$18,528,314	$51,665,035	$70,193,348
Proposal 5	$10,434,123	$29,094,895	$39,529,018
Proposal 6	$18,380,525	$51,252,936	$69,633,462
Proposal 7	$12,920,268	$36,027,354	$48,947,623
Proposal 8	$20,397,748	$56,877,834	$77,275,582

State sales tax revenue is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average annual Missouri General Revenue sales tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 1.515%)*

Income tax is calculated by multiplying the estimated increase in wages by average Missouri net individual income tax collections as a share of Missouri wages and salaries from 2015-2022 (or 4.523%) less an expected 6.6% reduction in collections due to the recent reduction of Missouri's top income tax bracket to 4.95%.*

V. Other downstream impacts of higher wages

Countless studies have also demonstrated the negative health impacts on adults and children of low wages as well as the negative impacts on child development, including academic achievement, of low wages. These situations often contain confounding variables that can make ascertaining cause and effect difficult, recent research using natural experiments to measure the direction of causation of the impact of public policies offers guidance for consideration. The research makes clear that “increases in parental income are found to lead to higher test scores and better educational outcomes for children, greater likelihood of employment in young adulthood, and improved earnings⁷.” While the exact impact on state or local revenue is difficult to predict, research shows that the impact of higher wages on student academic achievement were four times higher per dollar increase as the effects found in a study of class size reductions that cost around $12,000 per student⁸.” Direct impacts on state and local revenue, especially in the short term, are difficult to predict, but the growing body of research shows definite positive long term impacts on human development resulting from wage increases.

VI. Conclusion

Overall we conclude that these petitions would generate a minimum net benefit to state general revenue of between thirty three and seventy seven million dollars with an undetermined net benefit for local revenue based on local considerations. This benefit is the direct result of the wage increases. Other savings are likely to accrue from a decrease in spending on safety net programs and a downstream benefit to the families of recipients of the wage increases. We submit this information in hopes that it can be useful in your determination of the fiscal impact of the proposed initiatives. Should you need any other information please do not hesitate to contact our office.

Chapter 290, RSMo, is amended by amending section 290.502 and enacting fifteen new sections to be known as sections 290.600, 290.603, 290.606, 290.609, 290.612, 290.615, 290.618, 290.621, 290.624, 290.627, 290.630, 290.633, 290.636, 290.639, and 290.642, to read as follows:

290.502. 1. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, effective January 1, 2007, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of $ 6.50 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher.

2. The minimum wage shall be increased or decreased on January 1, 2008, and on January 1 of successive years, by the increase or decrease in the cost of living. On September 30, 2007, and on each September 30 of each successive year, the director shall measure the increase or decrease in the cost of living by the percentage increase or decrease as of the preceding July over the level as of July of the immediately preceding year of the Consumer Price Index for Urban Wage Earners and Clerical Workers (CPI-W) or successor index as published by the U.S. Department of Labor or its successor agency, with the amount of the minimum wage increase or decrease rounded to the nearest five cents.

3. Except as may be otherwise provided pursuant to sections 290.500 to 290.530, and notwithstanding subsection 1 of this section, effective January 1, [2019] 2025, every employer shall pay to each employee wages at the rate of not less than [$8.60] $13.75 per hour, or wages at the same rate or rates set under the provisions of federal law as the prevailing federal minimum wage applicable to those covered jobs in interstate commerce, whichever rate per hour is higher. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased [each year] by [$.85] $1.25 per hour, [effective January 1 of each of the next four years, until it reaches $12.00 per hour] to $15.00 per hour, effective January 1, [2023] 2026. Thereafter, the minimum wage established by this subsection shall be increased or decreased on January 1, [2024] 2027, and on January 1 of successive years, per the method set forth in subsection 2 of this section. If at any time the federal minimum wage rate is above or is thereafter increased above the minimum wage then in effect under this subsection, the minimum wage required by this subsection shall continue to be increased pursuant to this subsection 3, but the higher federal rate shall immediately become the minimum wage required by this subsection and shall be increased or decreased per the method set forth in subsection 2 for so long as it remains higher than the state minimum wage required and increased pursuant to this subsection.

4. For purposes of this section, the term "public employer" means an employer that is the state or a political subdivision of the state, including a department, agency, officer, bureau, division, board, commission, or instrumentality of the state, or a city, county, town, village, school district, or other political subdivision of the state. "Retaliatory personnel action" shall also include interference with or punishment for in any manner participating in or assisting an investigation, proceeding, or hearing under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

(11) "Same hourly rate", means the following:

(A) For employees paid on the basis of a single hourly rate, the same hourly rate shall be the employee's regular hourly rate.

(B) For employees who are paid multiple hourly rates of pay from the same employer, the same hourly rate shall be either:

(i) the wages the employee would have been paid for the hours absent during use of earned paid sick time if the employee had worked; or,

(ii) the weighted average of all hourly rates of pay during the previous pay period.

Whatever method the employer uses, the employer must use a consistent method for each employee throughout a year.

(C) For employees who are paid a salary, the same hourly rate shall be determined by dividing the wages the employee earns in the previous pay period by the total number of hours worked during the previous pay period. For determining total number of hours worked during the previous pay period, employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1), the Fair Labor Standards Act, shall be assumed to work 40 hours in each work week unless their normal work week is less than 40 hours, in which case earned paid sick time shall accrue and the same hourly rate shall be calculated based on the employee's normal work week. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(D) For employees paid on a piece rate or a fee-for-service basis, the same hourly rate shall be a reasonable calculation of the wages or fees the employee would have received for the piece work, service, or part thereof, if the employee had worked. Regardless of the basis used, the same hourly rate shall not be less than the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(E) For employees who are paid on a commission basis (whether base wage plus commission or commission only), the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the base wage or the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502.

(F) For employees who receive and retain compensation in the form of gratuities in addition to wages, the same hourly rate shall be the greater of the employee's regular hourly rate or 100% of the effective minimum wage specified in section 290.502 without deduction of any tips as a credit.

(12) "Sexual assault", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(13) "Stalking", as such term is defined in section 455.010.

(14) "Year", a regular and consecutive twelve-month period as determined by the employer; except that for the purposes of section 290.615 and section 290.627, "year" shall mean a calendar year.

290.603. 1. Employees of an employer with fifteen or more employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than fifty-six hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

2. Employees of an employer with fewer than fifteen employees shall accrue a minimum of one hour of earned paid sick time for every thirty hours worked, but such employees shall not be entitled to use more than forty hours of earned paid sick time per year, unless the employer selects a higher limit.

3. In determining the number of employees of an employer, all employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation on a full-time, part-time, or temporary basis shall be counted. In situations in which the number of employees performing work in the state for an employer for compensation per week fluctuates above and below 15 employees per week over the course of a year, an employer is required to provide earned paid sick time pursuant to subsection (1) of this section if it maintained fifteen or more employees in the state on the payroll for some portion of a working day in each of twenty or more different calendar weeks, including any periods of leave, and whether or not the weeks were consecutive, in either the current or the preceding year (irrespective of whether the same individuals were in employment in each working day).

4. All employees shall accrue earned paid sick time as follows:

(A) Earned paid sick time as provided in this section shall begin to accrue at the commencement of employment or May 1, 2025, whichever is later. An employee shall be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued. An employer may provide all earned paid sick time that an employee is expected to accrue in a year at the beginning of the year.

(B) Employees who are exempt from overtime requirements under 29 U.S.C. § 213(a)(1) of the Federal Fair Labor Standards Act will be assumed to work forty hours in each work week for purposes of earned paid sick time accrual unless their normal work week is less than forty hours, in which case earned paid sick time accrues based upon that normal work week.

(C) Up to 80 hours of earned paid sick time shall be carried over to the following year if the employee has any unused accrued earned paid sick time at the end of the year, but this law does not require an employer to permit an employee to use more than the applicable number of hours of earned paid sick time per year as set forth in subsection (1) and (2) of this section. Alternatively, in lieu of carryover of unused earned paid sick time from one year to the next, an employer may pay an employee for unused earned paid sick time at the end of a year which could be carried over and provide the employee with an amount of paid sick time that meets or exceeds the requirements of sections 290.600 through 290.642 that is available for the employee's immediate use at the beginning of the subsequent year.

(D) If an employee is transferred to a separate division, entity, or location, but remains employed by the same employer, the employee is entitled to all earned paid sick time accrued at the prior division, entity, or location and is entitled to use all earned paid sick time as provided in this section. When there is a separation from employment and the employee is rehired within nine months of separation by the same employer, previously accrued earned paid sick time that had not been used shall be reinstated. Further, the employee shall be entitled to use accrued earned paid sick time and accrue additional earned paid sick time at the re-commencement of employment.

(E) When a different employer succeeds or takes the place of an existing employer, all employees of the original employer who remain employed by the successor employer are entitled to all earned paid sick time they accrued when employed by the original employer, and are entitled to use earned paid sick time previously accrued.

(F) At its discretion, an employer may loan earned paid sick time to an employee in advance of accrual by such employee.

5. Any employer with a paid leave policy, such as a paid time off policy, who makes available an amount of paid leave sufficient to meet the accrual requirements of this section that may be used for the same purposes and under the same conditions as earned paid sick time under sections 290.600 through 290.642 is not required to provide additional paid sick time under this section.

6. Except as specifically provided in this section, nothing in this section shall be construed as requiring financial or other reimbursement to an employee from an employer upon the employee's termination, resignation, retirement, or other separation from employment for accrued earned paid sick time that has not been used.

7. Employees shall not accrue earned paid sick time before May 1, 2025. Employees who are employed or who commence employment on or after May 1, 2025 shall accrue earned paid sick time and be entitled to use earned paid sick time as it is accrued in accordance with sections 290.600 through 290.642. The Department may develop model posters and notices, engage in rule-making, initiate outreach programs, and engage in other activities for implementation of the provisions of sections 290.600 through 290.642 as authorized by those sections before May 1, 2025.

290.606. 1. Earned paid sick time shall be provided to an employee by an employer for:

(A) An employee's mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; an employee's need for preventative medical care;

(B) Care of a family member with a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs medical diagnosis, care, or treatment of a mental or physical illness, injury, or health condition; care of a family member who needs preventative medical care;

(C) Closure of the employee's place of business by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or an employee's need to care for a child whose school or place of care has been closed by order of a public official due to a public health emergency, or care for oneself or a family member when it has been determined by the health authorities having jurisdiction or by a health care provider that the employee's or family member's presence in the community may jeopardize the health of others because of his or her exposure to a communicable disease, whether or not the employee or family member has actually contracted the communicable disease; or

(D) Absence necessary due to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, provided the leave is to allow the employee to obtain for the employee or the employee's family member:

(i) Medical attention needed to recover from physical or psychological injury or disability caused by domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking;

(ii) Services from a victim services organization;

(iii) Psychological or other counseling;

(iv) Relocation or taking steps to secure an existing home due to the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or

(v) Legal services, including preparing for or participating in any civil or criminal legal proceeding related to or resulting from the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking.

2. Earned paid sick time shall be provided upon the request of an employee. Such request may be made orally, in writing, by electronic means, or by any other means acceptable to the employer. When possible, the request shall include the expected duration of the absence.

3. When the use of earned paid sick time is foreseeable, the employee shall make a good faith effort to provide notice of the need for such time to the employer in advance of the use of the earned paid sick time and shall make a reasonable effort to schedule the use of earned paid sick time in a manner that does not unduly disrupt the operations of the employer. Where such need is not foreseeable, an employer may require an employee to provide notice of the need for the use of earned paid sick time as soon as practicable.

4. An employer that requires notice of the need to use earned paid sick time where the need is not foreseeable shall provide a written policy that contains procedures for the employee to provide notice. An employer that has not provided to the employee a copy of its written policy for providing such notice shall not deny earned paid sick time to the employee based on non-compliance with such a policy.

5. An employer may not require, as a condition of an employee's taking earned paid sick time, that the employee search for or find a replacement worker to cover the hours during which the employee is using earned paid sick time.

6. Earned paid sick time may be used in the smaller of hourly increments or the smallest increment that the employer's payroll system uses to account for absences or use of other time.

7. For earned paid sick time of three or more consecutive work days, an employer may require reasonable documentation that the earned paid sick time has been used for a purpose covered by subsection (1) of this section.

(A) Documentation signed by a health care professional indicating that earned paid sick time is necessary shall be considered reasonable documentation for purposes of this section.

(B) In cases of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, if the employer requests, one of the following types of documentation selected by the employee shall be considered reasonable documentation: (i) a police report indicating that the employee or the employee's family member was a victim of domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, (ii) a written statement from an employee or agent of a victim service provider affirming that the employee or employee's family member is or was receiving services from a victim service provider; (iii) documentation signed by a health care professional from whom the employee or employee's family member sought assistance relating to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking or the effects thereof; (vi) a court document indicating that an employee or employee's family member is or was involved in a legal action related to domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking; or (v) a written statement from the employee affirming that the employee or employee's family member is taking or took earned paid sick time for a qualifying purpose of subsection (1) of this section.

(C) An employer may not require that the documentation explain the nature of the illness, details of the underlying health needs, or the details of the domestic violence, sexual assault, or stalking, unless otherwise required by law.

290.609. 1. It shall be unlawful for an employer or any other person to interfere with, restrain, or deny the exercise of, or the attempt to exercise, any right protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

2. An employer shall not take retaliatory personnel action or discriminate against an employee or former employee because the individual has exercised rights protected under sections 290.600 through 290.642. Such rights include, but are not limited to, the right to request or use earned paid sick time pursuant to sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to file a complaint or inform any person about any employer's alleged violation of sections 290.600 through 290.642; the right to participate in any investigation, hearing, or proceeding or cooperate with or assist the Department in any investigations of alleged violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642; and the right to inform any person of his or her potential rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642.

3. It shall be unlawful for an employer's absence control policy to count earned paid sick time taken under sections 290.600 through 290.642 as an absence that may lead to or result in discipline, discharge, demotion, suspension, or any other adverse action.

4. Protections of this section shall apply to any individual who mistakenly but in good faith alleges violations of sections 290.600 through 290.642.

290.612. 1. Employers shall give employees a written notice about earned paid sick time within fourteen calendar days of the commencement of employment or on April 15, 2025, whichever is later, which must include the following information: (1) beginning May 1, 2025, employees accrue and are entitled to earned paid sick time at the rate one hour of earned paid sick time for every 30 hours of work, and may use earned paid sick time, subject to the limits and terms under sections 290.600 through 290.642 of Missouri law, (2) it is prohibited for an employer to take retaliatory personnel action against employees who request or use earned paid sick time as allowed by law, (3) each employee has the right to bring a civil action if earned paid sick time as required by sections 290.600 through 290.642 is denied by the employer or the employee is subjected to retaliatory personnel action by the employer for exercising the employee's rights under sections 290.600 through 290.642; and, (4) the contact information for the Department. Notice shall be provided by the Employer to the employee on a single piece of paper, at least 8.5 x 11, in no less than 14-point font.

2. Beginning April 15, 2025, employers shall display a poster that contains the information required in subsection (1) of this section in a conspicuous and accessible place in each establishment where such employees are employed, provided that such poster has been made available by the Department.

3. The Department may create and make available to employers, model notices and posters that contain the information required under subsection (1) of this section for employers' use in complying with subsections (1) and (2) of this section. Nothing in this subsection shall be interpreted or applied, either expressly or through practical necessity, to require the Department to create or make available notices or posters if it requires the appropriation of funds to cover the costs of such acts.
